After the Agitation.

Exactly !: After the agitation. We believe that is over, and now what shall we do but employ our ingenuity and influence in a patriotic manner to bring peace to our dear old Commonwealth and contentment and thrift to her people? Oh, Virginians, these purposes and exertions are those which honor people who are noble and exalt States that are great.

We have had agitation while the people wanted to be let alone. We have had pictures of woe and despair while we have peace and a country whose natural wealth precludes all reason for despair and presents the bright rays of promise in the future. We all now see that time has been wasted in murmurs and lost in waiting for benefits that could only be secured by order and indus-

That a great change has come over the spirit of the people of Virginia is evident. That it should have come all reasonable people must see. Misfortune is not peculiar to any people. Freedom from calamity is not the exclusive right or condition of any. We have had afflictions and losses. We have "supped full of sorrow." But: we have had the vanity to believe that Virginians were more liberally endowed with the exalted virtues of stoicism in adversity, manhood and constancy in trial and misfortune, than has been the lot of most civilized people. The times, indeed, try men's souls, but it is the trial that should bring Republican electors in South Carolina. He out the noble virtues such as we have fond-

While the people have discovered that the hopes excited by partisans and political adventurers are illusory, their minds have been rivetted upon the measures of practical and true policy which alone promise to in the United States Court, and they who promote personal independence and the dignity of the Commonwealth. Proposition for the Consolidation and Reduction of the Virginia State

Let the General Assembly this winter pass an act for the consolidation of the entire indebtedness of Virginia into one single class of debt bearing four per cent. interest, and let the act, among other things, provide-

First. That every county and city treasurer in the State and the State Treasurer shall, on and after July 1, 1879, receive subscriptions to the new loan, and their official bonds to embrace all moneys so received by

Second. That any bonds or other evidences of debt of the State (except for West-Virginia's third, or for past-due interest on the State debt) may be received in paymentof subscriptions at the following valuations: Old State bonds not funded at fifty cents in the dollar if six-per-cent., or at forty-two cents in the dollar if five-per-cent. bonds; all funded bonds, whether coupon 5. ment of subscriptions to the new loan. Third. The new bonds shall be coupon bonds, or registered bonds convertible into coupon honds at the holder's option. Shall be non-taxable, bear four per cent. interest, and the interest-coupons shall be receivable in payment of State taxes (but no other demands or dues) to an amount equal to fifty per cent. of the State taxes at the time payable by the holder. The coupons shall, as soon as received into the State Treasury, be cancelled or destroyed. The bonds shall be in denominations of $20, $50, $100. $500, and $1,000. The bonds to run until redeemed by a sinking fund of one half of one per cent. Fourth. To each person paying his subscription in old unfunded bonds there shall be issued a certificate that the State, $5. without being otherwise in any respect liable, will pay to the holder such proportion of any moneys received hereafter from West Virginia, in discharge of that State's liability for the old debt of Virginia, as

Fifth. That all evidences of State debt $8. shall be just. now held by the sinking fund and the literary fund shall be cancelled, and in lieu of the latter a school annuity to be created equal to four per cent. interest on such bonds of the new loan as the literary fund $10. would be otherwise entitled to.

Sixth. That all past-due interest on the two-thirds of the debt recognized by Virginia, on accruling, on or before the 1st day of July, 1879, is to be paid at the Treasury n Virginia Treasury notes, in denomina tions of from $5 to $100, and in four series, $12. redeemable in 1885, 1890, 1895, and 1900, or at the pleasure of the General Assembly.
